TOP LEFT: Elizabeth was so taken with the kitchen shown in the movie Something's Gotta Give that she replicated it in her home. All the cabinetry and millwork was custom designed and built by a local cabinetmaker to ensure each piece fit perfectly. Angled drawers and detailed toe-kicks give cabinets the customized look Elizabeth wanted. TOP RIGHT: Detailed brackets show the cabinets' craftsmanship. A horizontal molding runs along all the cabinets to hide small lights underneath. BOTTOM RIGHT: Elizabeth loves her two large trash pullouts, one in the island and one near the large sink. Each pullout features one container for trash and another for recyclables, plus a shelf above for keeping a supply of trash bags and paper towels at the ready. BOTTOM LEFT: Cabinetmaker John Zanetti angled the drawers in the cabinets alongside the doorway from the kitchen to the keeping room. Angling the corners of the countertops and cabinets creates a welcoming entry, comfortably ushering people between the rooms.
